PARLIAMENT NEARS BEER ACT VOTE

Parliament will hear recommendations next week from its commission appointed to study the various aspects of the brewing industry and alcoholic consumption in England. Topics considered include the costs and benefits to society and possible government action. Diverse views are represented on the commission in the persons of M.P.'s Sir Henry Cole and Reginald Ormond, brewers Arnold Shank and Glenn Judson of Shank's and Theakston's respectively, and Sir Wystan Darte.

Recent developments in the brewing industry, including increased mechanization and improvements in cooling and refrigeration, continue to have far-reaching effects. However, while the industry supports many thousands of people throughout the country, the opposition to alcohol of any kind has grown considerably stronger of late.

Most attempts to control drinking in the last century were limited to strong drink. Such efforts as the 1736 Gin Act and the 1830 Beer Act were meant as much to encourage the drinking of beer and ale, drinks which support the farmer with their use of English-grown barley and hops, as to discourage the drinking of gin.

However, temperance reformers have been clamouring for more and stricter regulations on alcohol of all types. They have thus far succeeded in prohibiting the sale of drink on trains, and several recent London housing developments have prohibited the opening of pubs within their borders. Temperance leaders such as Jabez Balfour, F.N. Charrington of the Charrington Brewery family and William Booth of the Salvation Army are among those urging the prohibition of spirits and beer. This comes at the same time as increased competition among brewers and their growing control over public houses.

VICTORIA AND CHINESE IMMIGRATION

Melbourne, Sept. 4

The steamer Afghan, which has arrived here from Hong Kong, brought 368 Chinese labourers, 67 of them being for the port. The Victorian government, however has prohibited their being landed, and has placed the vessel in quarantine, where she has been for the last three days. The Government has refused to recognise the naturalization papers of the Chinese.

A FALSE ALARM

On Monday, in The Gazette, a paragraph appeared, under the head "Mysterious Affair," stating that the body of a man was discovered in Hainhault Forest, near Woodford-bridge, under circumstances which could leave no doubt that the individual had been murdered. The discovery, or rather the imaginary discovery, of the mangled remains, was made by a Bethnal-green youth, while blackberrying on Sunday last, and though he admits he had been dreadfully alarmed at the spectacle, he did not think proper to mention a word of the affair to the police, though he had met several on his way home, or any person for a whole day after, when he made his way to Scotland-yard, and made a statement there of the "Mysterious Affair." A sergeant and constable were despatched to the forest with him to secure the body, but their mission proved fruitless. Since that time a most diligent search has been made, but the police have not discovered anything which could in the slightest degree corroborate the lad's statement. On the contrary, they feel thoroughly convinced that the whole affair was perfectly imaginary.

CHARRINGTON CONTINUES CRUSADE

NEW FACILITY OPENS IN SOUTHWARK

Mr. Frederick N. Charrington presided over opening ceremonies on Sunday at his new Assembly Hall in Southwark. Located at 8 Borough High-street, the complex centres on a huge mission hall which can seat 5,000 people and consists, in addition, of a Coffee Palace, a book salon where 'pure' literature is sold, and rooms set aside for the use of Band of Hope, YMCA and YWCA programs.

Sir Alfred Sipton's opening speech set forth the spiritual and practical aims of the mission's creator: "Mr. Charrington not only offers salvation to the sinner, for he has undertaken operations on a large scale, in periods of distress, to feed the famishing and the starving, and I observe that in a short season of six weeks, six hundred pounds were spent on bread and cocoa. Blessed is he that considereth the poor."

As Sir Alfred so perspicaciously observed, Mr. Charrington understands that hunger and deprivation are the harsh realities which have to bne fought. However, he has also chosen the brothels and dens of vice frequented by 'fallen women' as targets for his campaign to rid the streets of 'evil houses and the horrible folk who batten on shame and enrich themselves with the wages of sin'. Mr. Charrington plans to continue his battle for 'purification' with the income he receives from the family's brewing operation in which he does not actively participate.

POLICE

EXTENSIVE BUTTON ROBBERIES— At the Birmingham Quarter Sessions, yesterday, Thomas Harris, pearl button turner, was indicted for having stolen 20 gross of pearl button blanks, the property of Messrs. Clarkson and Martin, his employers; and Jesse Ensor, a pearl button maker, was indicted for having received them knowing them to be stolen.

BURGLARY IN WEST END

The West End mansion of M. Jabez Balfour was robbed last night of more than £200,000 worth of jewelry belonging to Mrs. Balfour, the former Lady Bradford. The mansion, located at 50 Cadogan-street, was burglarized while the Balfours were dining with other well-known leaders of the temperance movement and other philanthropic organizations at the Eaton-place home of Sir Alfred Sipton. According to the police, the jewels were removed from the safe where they were habitually stored. While the police have not indicated that they presently have suspects in this burglary, they do say that the job appears to have been carried out by professionals.

AT MARYLEBONE, LENA BRUNE, otherwise BROWN, living at 151 Kings-road, appeared in answer to a summons charging her with using certain threatening, abusive, and insulting words towards her mother-in-law, Mrs. Brown, a widow living in King Henrys-road.

CHARRINGTON'S MORAL MICROSCOPE

THE OTHER SIDE OF CRIME

by George Naismith

With the escape Sunday last of Peter Northrup from Wormwood Prison, this reporter bethought this a suitable opportunity to recount the events which led to the imprisonment of this man who served as one of the finest engravers in the employ of Her Majesty.

Peter Northrup worked at the Royal Mint for eight years before his arrest earlier this year on counterfeiting charges. According to Sir Edgar Boehm, the Royal Engraver, Mr. Northrup was one of the finest engravers ever employed at the Royal Mint, and he had every chance of succeeding Sir Edgar upon the latter's retirement. Counterfeit £5 bank-notes were found in Mr. Northrup's possession, but the plates themselves were never recovered. Despite promises of leniency, Mr. Northrup steadfastly refused to co-operate with the authorities, neither surrendering the plates nor implicating anyone else in the counterfeiting scheme. In the end, despite the seriousness of the crime, Mr. Northrup's sentence of eighteen months was considered quite light, due both to the fact that he had no prior criminal record and to the charges being reduced to simple possession of counterfeit currency as there was no evidence that he had indeed manufactured the notes nor had he apparently yet tried to pass them.

Theories abound concerning the causes of crime among the poor of Whitechapel and Spitalfields, but how do we explain and prevent the crime of men such as Peter Northrup — talented men with loving families and promising futures? Greed is often offered as a reason, but Peter Northrup did not apparently live above his means, nor did he evidently aspire to grandiose material comforts. Perhaps if we could solve the riddle of the motivation to crime of men such as Mr. Northrup we could make strides in the prevention of the 'other' side of crime.

THE POPE AND THE NATIONAL LEAGUE

Rome, Sept. 4

Several radical journals have attacked England and English policy in Ireland in consequence of the Papal Brief against boycotting and the Plan of Campaign on the general ground that whatever the Pope condemns must merit Liberal praise, the Catholic journals warmly approve the Brief, and the Moniteur de Rome abstracts the leading article in The Times on the subject with high appreciation. At the Propaganda, confidence is held that the brief will produce the intended effect.

THE ITALIAN WINE TRADE

Rome, Sept. 4

Signor Grimaldi, Minister of Commerce, on the occasion of the Provincial Wine-Growers Exhibition at Catanzaro today delivered a speech in which he declared that Italy need have no fear for want of outlets for vine produce. There was now a considerable export of Italian wines to England, Germany, and Switzerland which would compensate for the deficiency as regarded France.

WORTHINGDON WEAKNESSES RUMOURED

by Christopher Jamison

Fears continue to grow among members of England's financial community that the Worthingdon Bank teeters on the brink of financial disaster. Bank president Jack Knox has repeatedly claimed that there is no substance to these fears, that the bank is solvent and quite confident concerning loans outstanding.

Knox's reassurances notwithstanding, however, it would perhaps behoove the Royal Banking Commission to quietly investigate the Worthingdon's legders. Particular attention should be paid to loans made to various companies under the direct or indirect control of Mr. Jabez Balfour, a director of Worthingdon. There is some evidence that these loans have not been evaluated by the same standards as the loans to other companies.

In reply to hundreds of letters from needy Jews wishing to go to Spain principally from Russia and Roumania, several of whom are already in Holland and Austria, WE WARN THEM that they have not the slightest chance of succeeding there and only starvation awaits them should they emigrate there, even if they understood Spanish, which none of them do. Emigration to Spain should only be encouraged in the case of those who occupy a self-dependent position in the country.

"Persons coming within this category would do well to place themselves en rapport with the Central Committee in Madrid for promoting the return of Jews to Spain when this Committee is definitely constituted. From such Committee capitalists and manufacturers might receive judicious counsel as the towns in which they could settle with the most advantage to themselves and the industries they represent.

THE ORIGIN OF THE WEATHER

To the Editor of the Times

Sir,— Mr. Henry Harries, under pretense of answering my letter to you, has utilized the occasion to attack a chart for 1888 I published a year ago. It is only fair that the public should know that Mr. Harries is a Junior Clerk in the Meteorological Office. He says my theory is worthless. Let him in a public assembly name any year he pleases and hand me a nautical almanac for the same, and if in two hours I do not write out a curve which will practically forecast the leading features for that year, I shall admit he has done much to substantiate his statement. As I distinctly state in my letter, I did not find my lunar curve satisfactory, I fail to see the value of his attack.

I am sir, your obedient servant

Dulwich B.G. Jenkins

CAPITAL & LABOUR

The Central News states:— "The threatened disturbance at the India group of the London Docks reached a most serious crisis at taking-on time yesterday morning, when 4,000 men, chiefly belonging to the East India Docks, refused to go on work. Delegates from these docks waited upon Mr. Tom Mann on Tuesday night at the union offices and clamoured for the introduction immediately into their division of the docks of the co-operative scheme, which has been so well received by the men at the Albert and Victoria Docks.

After an hour's argument and addresses from the leaders, the men agreed to resume work, the leaders promising to at once take steps to get the co-operative scheme introduced. The men commenced their duties in a very surly manner, but late last evening the union leaders expressed themselves satisfied that the trouble had been tided over for the present, and that the men would continue working."

LETTER FROM GENERAL GORDON

The South Australian Register of August 30 contains the following telegram dated August 28 from its own correspondent at Walaroo:—

On Friday morning Mr. Alfred Mallyon, accountant to Messr. Styles & Co. at Kadina, picked up in the street what there is every reason to believe is an original letter written by General Gordon in Khartoum on July 31, 1884. Mr. Mallyon presumes it is addressed to the British government. How it reached here is a mystery. The only solution that appears feasible just now is that lately a large number of Arab hawkers have been in the town, and on Friday four were seen close to the spot where the letter was picked up.

THE SALVATION ARMY

To bid farewell to the Indian party of the Salvation Army, a vast audience thronged every part of the great hall at St. Georges-road last night, and the proceedings were "led" by "General" Booth. The gathering was an impressive one, and the platform was crowded with new officers in Indian costume who are about to proceed to India with Commissioner Booth-Tucker. After prayers, and the singing of hymns and solos, the "General" addressed the meeting, and, amid loud shouts of "Hallelujah," described the progress which he said had been made by the army in India and Ceylon. While in 1885 the army had 15 corps, and 39 European and 41 native officers, they had in 1887 56 corps, and 166 European and 102 native officers. In the present year they had 96 corps, and 171 European and 273 native officers. Out of a total of 4,673 conversions there had been 263 Europeans, 317 Roman Catholics, 592 native "Christians," and 3,501 "raw heathens saved." The army was endeavoring to do some of its social work in India, and he asked the meeting to aid the work with their prayers, their blessings, and their contributions. In all 55 new officers were now heading out. The meeting was subsequently addressed by a converted Buddhist priest and by Commissioner Howard.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE

KING JA JA

Mr. A.E. PEASE asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether the statement which appeared in that day's papers that Ja Ja has been removed from Africa was true and, if so, where he had been taken.

SIR J. FERGUSON— I have answered that question very fully and distinctly on previous occasions. I told the House that I believed Ja Ja had gone, and that he was going to one of the Windward Islands — Grenada, I believe.

COURT THEATRE— The Prince of Wales and suite visited the Court Theatre last evening and witnessed the performance of Mama.

TWO STUDENTS FINED

CHARLES SHERWOOD, 19, and GEORGE MONKHOUSE, 17, medical students, were charged with assaulting the police and disorderly conduct in the streets. Thomas Couldray, a police sergeant, stated that about half-past twelve on Friday he saw a procession of 40 or 50 young men, whom he has since ascertained to be medical students, passing down Ludgate-hill. They were linked arm in arm, had sticks in their hands, and were knocking off people's hats. He spoke to some of them, when there was a cry of, "Let him have it," and the prisoner Monkhouse struck him over the eye with his cane. He took him into custody, and then Sherwood, going to Monkhouse's assistance, struck him in the shoulder with his umbrella. The prisoners paid their fine and went away laughing.

MURDER OF SIR HENRY COLE SHOCKS LONDON

The macabre murder of Sir Henry Cole has shocked London at its highest levels. The police are still looking for Reginald Ormond, in whose office Sir Henry's decapitated body was found yesterday. Police will not say if they suspect Mr. Ormond of Sir Henry's murder. They have not as yet been able to locate him for questioning.

Both Sir Henry Cole and Mr. Reginald Ormond are Members of Parliament and very influential in their respective parties. Both men are on the controversial Royal Commission appointed to make recommendations to the Parliament on the new Beer Act.

MURDER AND ROBBERY

Lambert's Jewelry Shop was the scene of a brutal murder and robbery early today. Edgar Joslin, owner of the shop, was murdered by one of the two robbers who broke into Lambert's just as the store was opening. Mr. Joslin was in his office with a client when the robbers entered the store. While one of the robbers held a gun on the two store clerks, the other thief entered Joslin's private office where he fatally shot Joslin and struck a blow to the head of the jeweler's client.

At the time this paper went to press, the identity of the client was still unknown. Moments after the robbers ran from Lambert's, the client departed the scene as well. Anyone with information relating to this incident or the identity of those involved is urged to contact Scotland Yard.

AMERICAN CHAMPION THRILLS LONDON AUDIENCE

Professor John Loris, the champion revolver and rifle shot of America, opened a week-long booking at the Elephant & Castle Theatre last night to the cheers of an enthusiastic audience. Loris surprised the crowd by his wonderful shooting. The feat that captured the spectators was shooting a glass ball dangling from his own head. This was accomplished by sighting a rifle upon a stand at a glass ball dangling from a string some eight yards away. Then Prof. Loris placed himself under the glass ball which just grazed his cap, and taking quick aim with another rifle at the trigger of the suspended rifle, fired, the ball striking the trigger, discharged the suspended rifle, the ball of which shattered the glass ball.

He also placed a revolver ball through a heart upon a card held by his assistant, the heart being about an inch in diameter. His assistant is a shapely young woman, Mlle. Altina, and she has remarkable nerve, or an unbounded confidence in her partner's marksmanship. The Professor shot cards from between her teeth, glass balls from her head and hands, and other feats that kept the spectators in a thrill.

Loris is a sturdily built Greek, 29 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, fairly handsome. He has lived in the United States since he was a lad of ten years. He was a gunsmith, and his trade brought him into rifle shooting. He has been successful in eleven matches, and now sighs for higher game. His last contest was with Ed Smith for the championship of Canada.

MAN FALLS TO DEATH

A man identified as Leland Johnson fell to his death during the night at his home in Clipstone-street. Johnson was a clerk at Lambert's Jewellers which was the scene of a daring robbery yesterday. Police have not dismissed the possibility of foul play. However, they have released no further information at this time.

LETTER FROM A DEAD MAN?

by Quintin Hogg

It has come to the attention of this reporter that the estimable consulting detective Mr. Sherlock Holmes received a letter by this morning's post from the late Mr. Vincent Derrick, the president of the Lands Allotment Company who was found dead outside the Queen's Park Hotel where he was staying last July. In the letter, Mr. Derrick requested that Mr. Holmes investigate his murder — the Medical Examiner has ruled that the death was the result of 'accidental causes.'

While we do not seriously believe that this letter was written by a 'dead man,' we do believe that the message should be taken seriously. The circumstances surrounding Mr. Derrick's death did present some interesting puzzles. Mr. Derrick was found on the bank of the Grand Junction Canal clad only in his dressing gown and slippers. The Medical Examiner determined that the cause of death was a blow to the head, presumably the result of a fall.

There was talk of suicide early in the investigation, although there was little evidence pointing to such a conclusion, nor was the deceased known to have any proclivity towards such a desperate and final act. Mr. Derrick was staying at the hotel in preparation for a business meeting the following day. None of his business associates could be reached to-day for comment.

We are anxiously awaiting the outcome of Mr. Holmes' investigation, and we hope that he will allow this paper to publish the results.

PORTRAIT OF THE LATE VINCENT DERRICK

SHOT HER THROUGH THE HEAD

(Subject of Illustration)

Charles Jones, aged twenty-four, Anna Devan, aged seventeen, and Julia McFarland, eighteen, all of Wymondham, Norfolk, went to Norwich the other day to shop. On their way back to Wymondham, Jones produced a revolver and said to Miss Devan:

"Will you marry me?"

"Yes, right now," she replied, "if you give me the revolver."

"You lie!" rejoined Jones, "you promised me this before, and afterward went back on me, and now I intend to kill you."

He then fired two shots at her, one taking effect in the head and the other in the back, killing her instantly. Julia McFarland jumped from the cart and Jones followed. He warned her to keep quiet or he would kill her, too. She fell on her knees and begged for mercy, and he told her to go. Then he walked a short distance from where he had shot Miss Devan in the cart, shot himself in the head, and fell dead.

A GIRL'S FIGHT FOR LIFE

(Subject of Illustration)

Miss Annie McManus, daughter of a well-known citizen of Birmingham, was in her father's library recently, when she was attacked by a bull dog. The animal fastened its teeth in her face. The young lady forced her hand into the dog's mouth, and seizing its tongue compelled the brute to release his hold. The dog then attacked her again and again. She was about sinking to the floor when members of the family arrived and drove off the dog, which was shot. Miss McManus was bitten in more that a score of places. The maddened animal was owned by the girl's father. She is disfigured for life.

JOE DARBY— the champion jumper of Great Britain, who is a wonder, has issued the following sweeping challenge to our friends across the Atlantic, reprinted here for the information of his countrymen:

Bolton, England,
28 August 1888

Sirs:— I will jump against any man in America for £100 or £500 a side at any style of jumping, give expenses to jump in England or take expenses to contend in America. I will back myself to beat any jumping record for stand hops or jumps, with or without weights, from one up to 20 rises, from £50 or upwards, or will give any man in the world 18 inches at two hops and a jump without weights, or two feet in five hops and a jump, with or without weights, for the same sum.

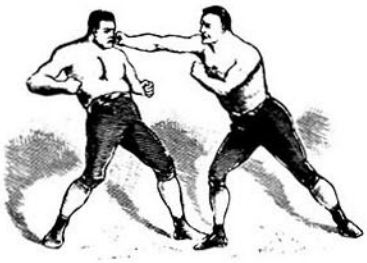
THE CHESTER CUP— was won by Dare Devil, son of Robert the Devil — Flor McIvon. Silver Spur was second and Tableau Vivant third, at Chester, England, on August 29. The race is a handicap for 700 sovereigns in plate or specie, at the option of the winner, added to a sweepstakes of 20 sovereigns each, for three-year-olds and upward; the second to receive 100 sovereigns, and the third 50 sovereigns out of the stakes. The race is over the Old Cup course, nearly two miles and a quarter. Dare Devil is a bay horse with several noteworthy wins to his credit, including the Drakelow Stakes, Craven Stakes and the Northumberland Autumn Plate.



UP-AND-COMING— young Marco Escobedo won his bout with American Cal McCarthy in Liverpool last week, taking a £50 purse for his efforts in the sixteen-round fight. Oliver Perkins, well-known promoter and manager of The Ring, announced afterwards that Escobedo has shown great improvement in all aspects of his fighting and compared him to the young Colin Kennedy. Perkins hinted at the possibility of a match with either Tom Gardner or Ted Pritchard, but that seems unlikely before Escobedo has proven himself in a few more fights. He certainly does appear to be a young man to watch.

MORGAN CROWTHER— the Welsh feather-weight champion, and Tom Wilson, fought on Saturday last at The Ring, London, for a £100 purse and £100 a side. In the ninth round Wilson knocked Crowther down and all but finished him off, but the latter rallied in surprising fashion, and the battle proceeded. The end came somewhat unexpectedly in the twenty-seventh round, when Wilson, after driving his left on the mark, sent his right across the jaw, and felled the Welshman like a log. The latter made a plucky attempt to rise, but fell again, and amid a scene of great excitement Wilson was declared the winner of a stubbornly fought contest. Mr. R. Watson was the referee, and Stanton Abbott, 8 stone champion, timekeeper.

LLOYD PERKINS FOUND DEAD
Suicide Suspected

Lloyd Perkins, a vice-president of Worthingdon Bank, and a respected member of the financial community, was found dead at his home Thursday afternoon. Police suspect that Mr. Perkins was killed by his own hand, but they are investigating the possibility of foul play. The thirty-two-year-old Mr. Perkins had only been at Worthingdon since March of this year. Prior to that he was Head Accountant at Shanks Brewery. Funeral arrangements will be announced at a later date.

ARREST MADE IN QUEEN'S PARK

Josh O'Rourke, a teamster in the employ of the Shanks Brewery, has been taken into custody in connection with the death of Peter Northrup, the convicted felon who escaped from Wormwood Prison on Sunday last. Northrup's body was discovered early yesterday in the Grand Junction Canal near the Queen's Park Gas Works. According to information released by the Coroner's office, Northrup was dead before being dumped into the Canal. O'Rourke has thus far refused to say anything about the charges, neither denying them nor confessing to them.

The Board of Works and Public-Houses

To the Editor of the Gazette

Sir,— This morning the Works committee of the Board of Works decided by a majority of three to one to re-erect as a public-house the King's Arms, Fulham High-street, recently pulled down on account of the new bridge works.

The inhabitants of Fulham only learnt on Tuesday last that the matter was to be decided so soon; there were only two days to work; in spite of this a petition was got up and signed by almost every resident within a mile of the spot, in the High-street itself there being only two refusals to sign.

The King's Arms has long been a source of annoyance to the people of Fulham, who have more than their fair share of public-houses and this action by the Committee of the Board of Works will cause keen regret and disappointment to them.

I write to you, Sir, in the hope that a public remonstrance may induce the Board to reconsider the determination of their Committee.

Faithfully yours,
John Sinclair, Vicar of St. Dionis
Lonsdale-house, Fulham Sept. 3

M. de Fonvielle has written, under the title "Mort de Faim" (Librarie Illustree), a very timely volume, designed to throw discredit on the alleged feats of fasting men. He shows, by authentic narratives of shipwreck and death from refusal of food by prisoners, what the real limits of abstinence are. He exposes the untrustworthiness of reported marvels in the way of fasting in our own and past times, and points out the suspicious character of the conditions laid down by modern performers. With his keen scent for imposture and quackery, M. de Fonvielle strikes unerringly at the weak point in all these exhibitions, and holds them up to merited ridicule.

CORONER'S INQUEST

At a late hour on Thursday evening Mr. W. Baker held an inquest at the Jolly Angler's, Lea-bridge, on the body of Ann Sayer, aged 20 years, niece of Mrs. Bull, of the Cat and Mutton Tavern, Hackney. Thomas Taylor, of the Jolly Anglers, waterman, deposed that on Thursday evening last, about 5 o'clock, a gentleman named Edwin Newman, accompanied by the deceased lady, hired a boat at the Jolly Anglers. The gentleman rowed the boat himself, and proceeded up the river towards Tottenham-mills. The gentleman appeared to understand the management of the boat, and to row well. About 7 o'clock the same evening witness heard a cry of distress, "Boat ahoy!" as if from some person in the water, proceeding from point about 200 yards from the Jolly Anglers. Witness immediately jumped into a boat and rowed to the spot, where he discovered the gentleman, Edwin Newman, in the water, holding onto the bottom of the boat he had hired, which was floating bottom upwards. Witness got Newman into the boat; he appeared rather intoxicated, but he knew what he was about. Witness then asked him where the lady was; he replied, "I have left her behind all right." He repeated this twice, and then said, "Where are my clothes?" Witness afterwards saw a coat and waistcoat floating in the water, which witness directly picked up. He then said, "Where is my hat?" Witness replied, "Mr. Green will bring you your hat." He replied, "Go and fetch my hat, I am not going to pay half a dozen people to pick up my clothes;" and witness had great difficulty in getting him to sit down in the boat, because he would not get it for him. On reaching the Jolly Anglers, where he (Newman) was landed, another gentleman in a boat said to witness, "For God's sake, young man, go back and look for the lady; she was in the boat when I passed them;" and he asked Newman where she was. He replied he had left her in the water. Witness then procured the drags and went to the spot and dragged for half an hour, but could not find the body. He returned to Newman, and asked him where the boat had been upset. He said near the point, and that three gentlemen in a boat had run over and swamped him. On examination, there was no evidence of the boat having been run over and swamped. Witness again dragged the river, and in a few minutes found the deceased's body off the point near where the boat had been upset. Newman appeared to witness able to have gone back with witness to render assistance, but he did not. Deceased was quite dead. The night was foggy and dark. Mr. Green, of Lea-bridge, boat-builder, deposed to seeing Newman rescued by the last witness. He then asked Newman if there had been any one else in the boat; he replied, "It's all right, there was no one but myself." Afterwards assisted Taylor in dragging for deceased's body. Not finding it, they returned to ask Newman where the boat was upset. He replied she was in the water. He did not appear to witness to be in liquor. Did not observe in his manner that anything unusual had taken place. He did not appear to be at all exhausted when taken out of the water. Mrs. Anne Lewis, Brunswick-street, Hackney-road, said that the deceased was her daughter. She was barmaid at the Cat and Mutton, Hackney, which is the occupation of Mr. Bull. Mrs. Bull is witness' sister. Witness saw the deceased last alive on the previous Thursday, in the afternoon, when she called upon her and stated that she was going to the Commercial-road. She had stated that she was under an engagement to be married, and before parting she observed, "I think, mother, that all will be settled by Christmas next." She also expressed a wish to see her father's portrait, which was in a drawer, stating that she wanted to take it with her to show Mr. Newman. Deceased was of the most steady habits. The coroner, at the conclusion of the evidence, on proposing to adjourn the inquiry, said that it would be necessary, if possible, to obtain the evidence of the three gentlemen who had hired a boat from the Jolly Anglers, and also of that gentleman who, it was said, stated that he had passed Mr. Newman at the time the deceased was in the boat. He accordingly directed Running, the summoning officer to use every exertion to find out those persons, and observed that he was not aware of the nature of the investigation or he would not have appointed the inquiry at so late a period of the day. All the information sent to him was, that it was a boat accident, with no particular circumstances attending it. The inquiry was then adjourned to Tuesday forenoon.

Police have no suspects at this time, but there is some suspicion that the bombing may be put at the door of Irish radicals.
